Winter Weather Update

SAVANNAH, GA (January 2, 2018) – According to the National Weather Service, there is a winter storm warning for Wednesday morning through evening for Chatham County. Sleet and snow accumulations of 1-3 inches may be likely across the county with a possibility of freezing rain accumulations up to 0.1 inch. Ice and/or snow on trees and power lines combined with wind gusts from 15 mph to 25 mph will likely result in some power outages. Roads and especially bridges, overpasses and elevated surfaces are likely to become hazardous. Wind chill values expected to be as low as the teens through early Thursday.
