Traffic Signals Out at Major Chatham County Intersection

Chatham County, GA (November 30, 2018) – The Chatham County Police Department is alerting drivers that the traffic signals are out at the intersection of the Truman Parkway and Montgomery Crossroads.

Officers on the scene say the traffic signal box was severely damaged during a car crash this morning. Officers have placed stop signs at the intersection until the signal can be repaired. It could be early afternoon before the signals are working again.

Motorists are urged to use extreme caution when approaching and stopping at the intersection, and be mindful of the crews working to repair the signal. If possible, motorists should avoid the intersection until the repairs are completed later today.
